

DANIEL S. MARRONE, PH.D.

Professor of Business & Mgmt Technology, Farmingdale State University

Daniel S. Marrone is a professor of Business and Management Technology at Farmingdale State College of the State University of New York. He earned an MBA in Management and a Ph.D. in Business Education. Dr. Marrone has undergraduate degrees from Queens College (CUNY) in art history and economics.

Dr. Marrone has attained the APICS Certified Fellow in Production and Inventory Management, as well as the Certified in Integrated Resource Management designations. He has other certifications as well – in quality auditing, engineering, management and industrial technology.

Dr. Marrone has presented at numerous APICS conferences and has had many articles and book reviews published. He has contributed to and has his name appear in more than a dozen textbooks in business, strategic management, mathematics and information processing.

In 2006, Dr. Marrone received the APICS Student Mentor Award at the APICS International Conference in Orlando, FL.